Stereoscopic Photography

While Sir Charles Wheatstone first mentioned the term stereoscope in 1838 it was Euclid who first described binocular vision. The left and right eyes see a different version of the same image. If the two images are merged they create a perception of depth.

In 1862, Oliver Wendell Holmes with Joseph Bates came out with the Holmes Stereopticon. Their viewing device soon dominated the market.

The Stereoscope slides in the Burritt Library are all mounted on cardboard and were manufactured by the Keystone View Company of Meadville, Pennsylvania.

Most of the slides are undated; they were probably produced between 1890s and the 1920s. There are about 500 slides in the collection.
