

STANLEY WORKS WAR ORDERS

Another Local Concern Is Getting Business Through European Conflict.

It will be a general source of surprise to learn that another of the New Britain manufacturing concerns in addition to North & Judd, Corbin Erew Corporation and the New Britain Machine Company, is getting war business. This is the Stanley Works. The company is making parts of the shrapnel shell, and a device for carrying the shell. Some of the preliminary work is done in the main plant of the company in this city, but the main part of it is being done in the company's new plant, which was recently established in Canada. The company employs 150 men there already and it is expected that it will increase rapidly.
